Zoe Stokes

Zoe Stokes brings a strong foundation in government affairs and public policy to support the clients of Princeton Public Affairs Group (PPAG). She has gained experience across multiple levels of government through legislative research, policy analysis, and the monitoring of issues. As a Public and Government Affairs Analyst, Ms. Stokes attends New Jersey legislative committee meetings and voting sessions to keep clients informed on developments. In addition, she provides support on client meetings through legislative updates and assists in managing the internship program.

Prior to joining PPAG, Ms. Stokes worked as a Research Associate for the Jack Ciattarelli Campaign for Governor. Additionally, she interned in the Washington, D.C. office of Congresswoman Elise Stefanik and as a legislative intern for New Jersey Assemblyman Ron Dancer.

A graduate of Colgate University, Ms. Stokes earned a B.A. in Political Science and Environmental Studies, graduating magna cum laude. With a swimming career that spans nearly two decades, she competed on the Women's Swimming and Diving Varsity Team throughout her four years at Colgate. During her collegiate career, she was a three-time Patriot League Championship qualifier, a two-time Colgate record breaker, and a recipient of the Iron Woman Award. On campus, she served on the Student Athlete Advisory Committee and was the Co-Director of Philanthropy, where she led initiatives across campus to support the Hamilton, NY community.
